

Naxos/Paros/Ios By Design

Naxos The largest and most fertile of the Cyclades, Naxos beckons the hiker, the medieval history buff and the lover of Byzantine art as brilliantly displayed on the walls of more than 100 churches. In town, see: the Kastro, a fort built on the hill by the Venetians in the 13th century, which houses a museum of early Cycladic art; an unfinished temple on Platia, the islet joined to town by a causeway; the Archaeological Museum of Naxos which rivals Delos for the best collection of antiquities in the islands. Inland, the landscape of dramatic mountains, remote villages and lush gardens surpass that of the other Cyclades. On the western side of the island lie the best beaches and you can look forward to good eating and fine wines in many choices of restaurants and outdoor cafes.

Paros Exploring Paros is delightful. The island is famous in history for its marble which was used by Praxiteles for his glowing white marble sculptures, such as Venus de Milo. Dating back to 3500 B.C., Paros has a large number of ruins scattered about the island which is pastoral and hilly, with each summit seemingly topped by a private monastery. The most famous church in all the islands, Panayia Ekatondapiliani (Our Lady of One-Hundred Doors) was built in 600 A.D. and sits right at the port of Parikia. Night life on Paros, particularly in the fishing port of Naoussa, rivals that of Mykonos, and Paros offers many water sports and some fine beaches.
