At the easternmost part of the Aegean sea are the islands of Lesbos (Mytilene), Chios, and Samos. These islands played an important role in the development and creation of the Greek State. They achieved prominence around the 2nd millennium B.C. and enjoyed great prosperity, cultural and commercial success as attested by finds from ongoing excavations.

Chios 27 nautical miles south of Lesbos together with the smaller islands of Psara and Oinousses occupy a distinct place in the history of ancient and modern Greece. Chios claims to be the birthplace of Homer. The island of Psara made a valiant contribution to the war of Independence from the Ottoman Empire. The hero of the revolution Konstatinos Kanaris was from Psara. The adjacent island of Oinousses produced some of the world's well known shipping tycoons who still maintain summer mansions on the island.

Samos Is situated in the easternmost part of the Aegean, very close to Asia Minor and has a population of 40,000 inhabitants. Regular air service and ferry boat service is available from Athens. Its proximity to Turkey gives access to Ephessos (Kusadası) by ferry boat. It presents an ideal condition for a visit to the important ancient city. Samos has a long distinguished history dating back to 3000 B.C. The island joined the Athenian League and fought alongside with Athens against Sparta, during the Peloponnesian war. Afterwards it passed in the hands of Macedonians, Egyptians, Romans, Venetians, and the Ottomans. Wonderful beaches and verdant landscape are the main feature in Samos, and so are vineyards producing the first Sautern wine in Greece.

Ionia Maris ★★★★★

Built in 1991 this hotel is situated on the beach of Gangou and has 56 rooms with music, telephone, air-conditioning and large balcony. The hotel offers a TV room, dining room, 2 swimming pools and a snack bar at the pool.
